PLAN CHRISTMAS GIVING

Protest Against Change in Name of Thoroughfare-Cases Before Local Courts.

Special Correspondence of The Star. ALEXANDRIA, Va., December 21 .-Preparations for the Yuletide season are being rapidly completed by Alexandrians. During the rush incident to such preparations the various charitable and benevolent organizations and the citizens of the city are not going to overlook the poor. Hundreds of indigent persons will be made to feel the spirit of the season Christmas eve, for at every home where it is known that help is needed a gift will be left. Food and clothing will distributed by many organizations and the children will not be overlooked, for candy, nuts and toys are also included in the lists of organizations that are engaged in the work. the name of Mount Vernon avenue to Carlin avenue, which was done recently by the board. The matter was presented to the board yesterday and taken under advisement.

The board named it Carlin avenue in recognition of services given by Representative Carlin in securing funds from the government for its construction. Both the government and county hore the cost of construction.

The principal reason urged against the change is that it would be confusing, as the road has always borne the name of Mount Vernon avenue.

This road, recently completed, extends from Washington to this city via Hume Springs, Del Ray and the poorhouse lane.

Making Oxygen.

A new formula for purifying the air fn an inclosed chamber has been re-cently tested before experts representing the United States and Russian governments as a means of improving living conditions on the submarine.

The inventor of the new process entered a box six feet high and four feet square, taking with him a chain, a hook, food and the required chemicals. The box was sealed and submerged in a tank of water. Both tank and box had glass tops permitting continual observation. Tests of the air were made at regular intervals.

tinual observation. Tests of the air were made at regular intervals. Whenever the percentage of oxygen was too low, the inventor released a fresh supply of his chemicals, which promptly turned the poison carbon dioxide exhaled by the lungs into new oxygen. The formula is secret, but has been demonstrated successfully before a number of scientific bodies.

Our Radio Service Today.

One profession that is not over radio operator. The United States is lways in need of competent men for its increasing wireless service, and in case of war it would be a difficult matter to secure enough professional operators for all of the ships and stations. million amateur operators who are using their own instruments in all parts of the country with the permission and under the supervision of the government service. Many of them are just bungling beginners, of course, but there are also a lot of competent operators among them.

The young man enlisting in the national radio service gets a thorough training with one of the largest and most varied equipments in the world. The first of the four years of his term of enlistment is spent at one of the naval electrical schools, which are located in New York, Chicago and on Mare Island near San Francisco. Here he learns all that the experts can teach him about all the different varieties of radio apparatus, including the telefunken, which is the type used by the German army and by most of the large commercial services.

In order to enlist in the government

In order to enlist in the government service a man must be able to take dictation in the Morse code at a speed of twenty-five words a minute and must be able to receive twenty words a minute. This modest proficiency may be easily acquired in many technical high reproductive where wireless telegraphy is and there were still bills to pay.

Most of the government instruments are manufactured on contract, but there are now so many efficient wireless men in the service that nearly anything could be designed by them and manufactured at the navy yard.

By far the most noticeable improvement in recent years is the reduction of the noise guest by sending from ment in recent years is the reduction of the noise caused by sending from the big stations. For example, the new high-power station at Darien on the Isthmus of Panama is scarcely audible at a hundred yards, while the old one at Colon, which was the first tower erected in the Canal Zone, made so much noise that it was a subject of complaint. The old type of wireless station made a noise exactly like a small sawmill. A rumor that the Germans had set up a secret wireless station in the middle of New York not long ago was traced to a small portable sawmill which was running day and night in the back of a shop.

Claire, who had always been the brave member of the partnership, was more silent and depressed than ever that night. The agent had called again. The old man did not appear the next day and no loss of money was reported at the office. John speculated as to the possibility that the old gentleman had forgotten the incident and did not know how to account for his loss. There was nothing to do but wait until he took the car again. "Won't he be surprised and happy when he gets it back?" the conductor reflected. But several days passed and the limping passenger did not reappear.

He found Claire in tears when he came into the house a few nights later. In answer to his anxious word, she silently handed him an envelope. It was a peremptory note, stating that unless the deferred payments were arranged for at once it would be necessary to carry out the terms of the contract.

The next morning as they approached the crossing John saw the crippled man hurrying to catch the car. The motorman had not seen him signal and the conductor, with his hand on the cord, hesitated. Then he jerked the bell and stepped down to help the old man on. The man greeted him with a smile of recognition and a friendly "good afternoon." It was evident that he had not connected his loss with the conductor. Again temptation clutched John. He stopped the car at the next crossing and rang up his fares while he tried to think straight. Then he moved quickly, drew the bill from his pocket and, holding it out, said:
